IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE STATE OF WASHINGTON FOR KING COUNTY

WASHINGTON BANKERS
ASSOCIATION, a Washington Public
Benefit Corporation, and AMERICAN BANKERS ASSOCIATION, a District of Columbia Non-Profit Corporation,

Plaintiffs,

v.

STATE OF WASHINGTON,
DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE OF THE STATE OF WASHINGTON, and VIKKI
SMITH, as Director of the Department of Revenue of the State of Washington,

Defendants.

Case No.

COMPLAINT FOR DECLARATORY RELIEF

Plaintiffs, by and through their attorneys, allege the following Complaint for Declaratory Relief against Defendants the State of Washington, the Department of Revenue of the State of Washington, and Vikki Smith, as Director of the Department of Revenue of the State of Washington:

I. NATURE OF THE CASE

1. Substitute House Bill 2167 (“SHB 2167” or the “Act”), titled an “AN ACT Relating to tax revenue; adding a new section to chapter 82.04 RCW; and creating a new section,” was rushed through the Washington State Legislature in the final two days of the 2019 Regular Session and signed into law by Governor Jay Inslee on May 21, 2019. The Act imposes a

1 1.2% Business and Occupation (“B&O”) surtax on gross income of “specified financial 2 institutions,” effective January 1, 2020.

3 2. A “specified financial institution” is defined in the Act as any registered bank, 4 thrift institution, savings and loans association, or other financial institution “that is a member of 5 a consolidated financial institution group that reported on its consolidated financial statement for 6 the previous calendar year net income of at least one billion dollars, not including net income 7 attributable to noncontrolling interests, as the terms ‘net income’ and ‘noncontrolling interest’ are 8 used in the consolidated financial statement.”

9 3. Because the net income threshold in SHB 2167 is set at one billion dollars, the 10 only financial institutions that qualify as “specified financial institutions” under SHB 2167—and 11 thus, the only financial institutions subject to the Act’s 1.2% B&O surtax—are approximately 12 twenty large financial institutions that are domiciled outside of Washington and that do business 13 in interstate commerce and in Washington. By design, no Washington-domiciled financial 14 institution is taxed under SHB 2167.

15 4. Taxing only out-of-state financial institutions was the explicit intent of the Act’s 16 sponsors and proponents, who waited until two days before the end of the Legislative Session to 17 introduce SHB 2167 notwithstanding the requirement of Article II, Section 36 of the Constitution 18 of the State of Washington for legislation to be introduced at least ten days prior to the close of 19 the Legislative Session, barring a two-thirds vote in both houses. The Act’s proponents 20 steamrolled SHB 2167 through the Washington State House of Representatives and Senate 21 without the benefit of a complete fiscal note or meaningful review by legislative committees, the 22 Department of Revenue, the Attorney General, or the public.

23 5. Plaintiffs seek a declaratory judgment that SHB 2167 is unlawful and invalid 24 because (1) the Act was enacted in violation of Article II, Section 36 of the Constitution of the 25 State of Washington, and (2) the Act’s imposition of a 1.2% surtax on gross income of specified 26 financial institutions, all of whom are out-of-state entities, discriminates against interstate 27 commerce in violation of the Commerce Clause of the United States Constitution.
28

1 II. PARTIES

2 6. Plaintiff Washington Bankers Association (“WBA”) is a Washington Public 3 Benefit Corporation that represents the interests of commercial banks operating throughout the 4 state of Washington. WBA’s principal place of business is in Seattle, Washington. More than 5 97% of all commercial bank deposits in Washington are held in WBA member banks, which 6 range in size from multi-state financial institutions to local family-owned and community banks.
7 WBA’s mission is to support and advance the banking industry in the Pacific Northwest and 8 beyond, and it engages with lawmakers and provides advocacy and educational services to 9 support its mission and the missions of its members. On information and belief, financial 10 institutions that meet the Act’s definition of “specified financial institutions” and will be subject 11 to the surtax the Act imposes beginning on January 1, 2020 are among WBA’s member banks.
12 WBA has a direct interest in representing its members’ legal, business, and financial interests in 13 Washington, including its members’ interests in avoiding and removing extraordinary tax burdens 14 imposed in violation of the Washington Constitution and the United States Constitution.

15 7. Plaintiff American Bankers Association (“ABA”), a nonprofit organization 16 organized under the laws of the District of Columbia and headquartered in Washington, D.C., 17 represents the interests of banks of all sizes and their employees across the United States. ABA 18 provides educational tools and insights to its members; supports and promotes technological 19 advancements to make banking services more efficient, convenient, and secure; and advocates to 20 promote government policies that support the banking industry’s diversity and the role of banks 21 as drivers of economic growth and job creation. On information and belief, ABA member banks 22 include all of the approximately twenty financial institutions that meet the Act’s definition of 23 “specified financial institutions” and will be subject to the surtax the Act imposes beginning on 24 January 1, 2020. ABA has a direct interest in representing its members’ legal, business and 25 financial interests in Washington, including its members’ interests in avoiding and removing 26 extraordinary tax burdens imposed in violation of the Washington Constitution and the United 27 States Constitution.

28 8. Defendant is the State of Washington.

1 sustainable economic development for all the state’s citizens. Neither the claims asserted nor the 2 declaratory judgment relief requested requires the participation of individual WBA members in 3 this lawsuit.

4 14. ABA has associational standing to challenge the Act’s constitutionality. ABA’s 5 members include non-Washington financial institutions that pay taxes in this state and will suffer 6 immediate, concrete, and specific economic injury beginning as of January 1, 2020, the date the 7 Act’s unconstitutional B&O surtax on specified financial institutions goes into effect. ABA has a 8 direct interest in protecting its members from unconstitutional taxes. In support of its mission, 9 ABA regularly advocates in support of legislation and policies that allow banks of all sizes to 10 better serve their customers and communities, and to avoid unlawful burdens on their members’ 11 businesses and operations. Neither the claims asserted nor the relief requested requires the 12 participation of individual ABA members in this lawsuit.

13 15. The Court may also hear this action because it involves a controversy of 14 substantial public importance that immediately affects significant segments of the population who 15 have banking relationships, and because it has a direct bearing on commerce, finance, and all 16 other sectors of the state’s economy that depend on financial institutions operating in competitive 17 and efficient markets. By nearly doubling the B&O tax on specified financial institutions—all of 18 which are non-Washington financial institutions—employing and serving a significant portion of 19 the public throughout the state, the Act will have an imminent effect on broad segments of the 20 economy and population. The resolution of Plaintiffs’ claims will also have a substantial effect on 21 the state Legislature’s abuse of “title-only bills” to evade constitutional requirements for 22 legislation.

23 V. ALLEGATIONS OF FACTS

24 16. House Bill 2167 (“HB 2167”) was introduced in the House of Representatives and 25 referred to the House Finance Committee on April 10, 2019, under the sponsorship of 26 Representative Gael Tarleton, 36th District. HB 2167, titled “AN ACT Relating to tax revenue; 27 and creating a new section,” contained a single section that read in its entirety, “The legislature 28 intends to enact legislation concerning tax revenue.”

1 17. HB 2167 was a “title-only” bill, a bill which contains a title and a number but is 2 without legislative substance. Title-only bills are introduced for the express purpose of having a 3 vehicle on which to graft substantive legislation to be introduced at a later time.

4 18. Title-only bills are an artifice created by legislators to evade the Washington State 5 Constitution’s requirements for the timely introduction and consideration of legislation.
6 Article II, Section 36 of the Washington State Constitution provides:

7 WHEN BILLS MUST BE INTRODUCED. No bill shall be considered in 8 either house unless the time of its introduction shall have been at least ten days 9 before the final adjournment of the legislature, unless the legislature shall 10 otherwise direct by a vote of two-thirds of all the members elected to each 11 house, said vote to be taken by yeas and nays and entered upon the journal, or 12 unless the same be at a special session.

13 19. As their name suggests, title-only bills are introduced at least ten days before the 14 end of the legislative session with only a title and no substantive content. Once introduced, title-15 only bills remain on the legislative “shelf,” available as needed to be substantively amended with 16 content in the final days of the legislative session without the approval of a two-thirds 17 supermajority of both houses that is required by Article II, Section 36. The “substituted” bills are 18 then rushed through the legislative process without the minimum ten days for legislators, much 19 less Washington’s public, to review, consider, and react to the policy proposals they contain.

20 20. The use of title-only bills to evade the requirements of Article II, Section 36 of the 21 Washington State Constitution is an open and notorious practice by Washington legislators. The 22 Washington State Legislature even includes a definition of “title-only bill” in the “Glossary of 23 Legislative Terms” publicly available on its website. As defined by the Washington State 24 Legislature, a title-only bill is “[a] bill which contains nothing more than a title and a number. It 25 is introduced in order to have a vehicle on which to amend substance at a later time.”¹

26 21. HB 2167 was one of 26 title-only bills introduced during the 2019 Regular 27 Session, and one of four title-only bills that were substituted with bills containing substantive 28 content in the final two days of the Session, rushed through the Legislature, and signed into law

¹ Glossary of Legislative Terms, Washington State Legislature, <https://app.leg.wa.gov/billinfo/glossary.aspx>.

1 on May 21, 2019. In fact, the Washington State Legislature maintains a separate topical index of 2 “title-only bills” because title-only bills lack a substantive topic.²

3 22. The sponsors of HB 2167 provided no substantive information to lawmakers, 4 legislative analysts, or the public about its contents. On April 10, 2019, a legislative coordinator
5 at the DOR notified DOR staff that HB 2167 and HB 2168 had been introduced in the House
6 earlier that day, writing, “They are Title Only bills, so anyone’s guess what they will include.”

7 23. On April 26, 2019, two days before the close of Session, SHB 2167 was 8 substituted for HB 2167 and read for the first time before the House Finance Committee.
9 SHB 2167 revealed for the first time during the Session that its proponents intended to impose a 10 new 1.2% B&O surtax on financial institutions with consolidated annual net income in excess of 11 one billion dollars. This new tax represented an approximately 80% B&O tax rate increase on 12 affected financial institutions—all of which are out-of-state entities—from a prior rate of 1.5% to 13 the new aggregate B&O rate of 2.7%. It is expected to raise over $100 million in the state budget 14 biennium that commenced July 1, 2019, and over $200 million per biennium thereafter.

15 24. The House Finance Committee held a single public hearing on SHB 2167 the 16 same day it was introduced, April 26. During the hearing, the Committee’s staff fiscal analyst 17 was unable to answer questions raised by legislators concerning the number of in-state and out-18 of-state financial institutions that would be subject to the proposed tax. At the hearing, 19 Representative Drew Stokesbary, 31st District, questioned whether SHB 2167 raised “potential 20 dormant Commerce Clause impacts if we are only applying taxes to out of state businesses”—a 21 question that went unanswered by Committee staff or by the bill’s sponsor, House Finance 22 Committee Chair Tarleton.³ In connection with the hastily convened hearing, testifying members

26 bills that were passed in substituted form during the 2019 Regular Session are SB 6004, HB 2140, HB 2167, and 27 HB 2168.

28 ³ A video recording and unofficial transcript of the House Finance Committee’s April 26, 2019 public hearing is provided by Washington’s public access television service, TVW. See House Finance Committee, April 26, 2019 Public Hearing: HB 2167, HB 2168 and Possible Executive Session: HB 2167, HB 2168, recording at 10:22-10:35.

1 of the public, including Plaintiff WBA, objected that they had no meaningful opportunity to 2 review the bill, and raised concerns that legislators had not properly vetted, or even identified, the 3 consequences of nearly doubling the effective B&O tax rate on an undisclosed number of 4 financial institutions. No fiscal note was available for review during the hearing, as the bill’s 5 sponsors had only requested one from the Office of Financial Management the day before, on 6 April 25.

7 25. Later that same day, a Committee staff fiscal analyst emailed Chair Tarleton, 8 Committee members, and staff to respond to questions posed during the Committee hearing on 9 SHB 2167, including particularly whether “any Washington domiciled banks . . . would be 10 subject to the additional B&O rate.” The fiscal analyst responded that the “Department of 11 Revenue is checking,” but observed that “no state chartered banks would be subject to the 12 additional tax or were assumed in the fiscal estimate” because “no state chartered banks . . .
13 generated one billion dollars in the previous year.” The conclusion that no Washington-chartered 14 banks would be hit with the SHB 2167 surtax was confirmed by DOR staff the following 15 morning, when they reported that DOR “could not identify any state-chartered banks that are a 16 member of a ‘consolidated financial institution group’ that had net income of $1 billion or more.”

17 26. SHB 2167 was debated on the floor of the House of Representatives at 2:40 a.m.
18 on April 27, 2019. During this debate, the bill’s sponsor, Representative Tarleton, attempted to 19 allay legislators’ concerns that the bill might negatively affect in-state financial institutions.
20 Representative Tarleton explained that SHB 2167 targeted “literally less than two dozen entities, 21 that are parent companies or their affiliates” and described the targets of SHB 2167 as “mega-22 banks” and “the very largest banks in the world that have the capacity [sic] and access to capital 23 all over the world.” Representative Tarleton’s comments from the debate appear, in part, below:

24 “While it is true that business models might vary among these various players, 25 the fact remains that those institutions, those entities that will be subjected to an 26 increase in their business and occupation tax rate from 1.5 to 2.7 percent are 27 only those few—literally less than two dozen entities—that are parent 28

1 companies or their affiliates that are bringing in more than a billion dollars of 2 net income on an annual basis on their consolidated financial statements.”⁴

3 “Recognizing that these mega-banks are not actually serving many 4 communities in under-served and rural communities around the state, we have 5 learned in this state’s history as well as today that we rely substantially on 6 community banks and credit unions to go where no one else will go. I’d rather 7 see opportunities to expand participation for those entities rather than 8 rewarding those who have chosen not to be there when their profits were 9 at their highest. So, let’s help the community banks and the small credit 10 unions and let’s make sure that the largest banks in the world are going to 11 pay the tax.”⁵

12 “. . . these largest institutions that do business all over the world and have 13 plenty of resources to invest in our local communities, when they choose not to, 14 that is making a choice about their business practices. If they have not chosen 15 to participate in local economies and put money into local communities, 16 it’s hard for me to imagine that the credit we give them, the benefits we 17 give them, will return to invest in the people that need it the most. So, I’d 18 rather see local institutions working with local banks. In my own district, 19 Mr. Speaker, we have lots of local banks that have supported the fishing 20 community, for example, over literally decades and decades, and I’m hoping 21 that we see a resurgence of that kind of participation in the local 22 economy.”⁶

23 “These are the very largest banks in the world that have the capacity and 24 access to capital all over the world and they don’t necessarily come right here 25 at home where we live, and we need them. And before we give extra credit to 26 those who are in a position to help support all of us, let’s try to make sure that 27 they are literally in a position to demonstrate that they want to be here in 28 our own communities supporting us while they benefit from the very extensive resources of this state.” “I haven’t seen the commitment to the local communities from these largest institutions that we need to see to support our state.”⁷

29 30 27. Representative Tarleton’s comments leave no doubt that SHB 2167 was 31 introduced at the last possible moment of the 2019 Regular Session to target fewer than two 32 dozen large, out-of-state financial institutions, disadvantaging them in comparison to 33 Washington-based financial institutions.

1 28. The Ways and Means Committee of the Washington Senate held its only public 2 hearing on SHB 2167 later in the same day, April 27. In a repeat showing of the House Finance 3 Committee hearing the day before, lawmakers sought basic information about the bill including 4 which taxpayers would be subject to the tax, while members of the public including WBA argued 5 that they had not been given sufficient time to understand and provide feedback on the bill.

6 29. The partial fiscal note produced that day confirmed that approximately twenty 7 taxpayers—the “largest banks in the world” as described by Representative Tarleton earlier that 8 morning—were expected to be subject to the new tax. A DOR staff member later explained that 9 the estimated number of affected taxpayers was “based on who we think is subject to the 10 increased B&O,” before admitting, “[w]e did not have a lot of time to do the fiscal note/estimates 11 as this bill was unforeseen and near the end of session.”

12 30. SHB 2167 was debated on the floor of the Washington State Senate on April 28, 13 2019. Senators from both political parties expressed concern that the bill was being rushed 14 through the Legislature in the final two days of the 2019 Regular Session without proper 15 deliberation or review by the Washington State Office of the Attorney General and that its 16 targeting of large out-of-state financial institutions unconstitutionally discriminated against 17 interstate commerce. Their comments appear below:

Senator	Statement on the Floor of the Washington State Senate
Sen. John Braun (R), 20th Dist., Centralia	Mr. President, this a bill that just came into existence two days ago. We know that we haven’t had a legal analysis from our attorney general. We know that there are potentially large Commerce Clause [implications]. We’ve had the private sector weigh in with, I think, very legitimate concerns about whether this is even legal from a federal law standpoint. This bill has come without any significant deliberation from the House to the Senate. It moved in one day through the Senate committee. ⁸
Sen. Mark Mullet (D), 5th Dist., Issaquah	I can 100% guarantee to every person in this body that not at one point has [the Senate Banking Committee] looked at this issue that was presented on Friday—out of the blue, from nowhere —in any way, shape or form. And I think, if we as a body are going to take a bill that clearly seems to violate the

1 2 3 4	Commerce Clause, it clearly says if you're an out-of-state bank—because the way we've defined the definition of a billion dollars in net profits, not a single bank in Washington meets that definition. So, in-state banks pay half the tax rate of what the out-of-state banks will pay. This is a violation of the Commerce Clause. ⁹
5 6 7	I don't know why this [bank tax bill] didn't go through a financial committee. It should have The fact of the matter is that this policy was slapped in a title-only bill and jammed through at the last minute. ¹⁰
8 9 10 11 12	You can't have a differential tax scheme, like we're proposing here, that so clearly, so obviously differentiates between in-state and interstate banks without failing the smell test. So maybe this could be drafted in a way that avoids [the] interstate commerce failures of this bill. So, for that reason we shouldn't be doing at the eleventh hour—like much of what we've been doing when it comes to tax policy over the last forty-eight hours seem so rushed, ill-conceived. I think it will have tremendous unintended consequences. ¹¹
13 14 15 16	Mr. President these are big issues, but just to use the lines that "oh it's the one hundred fifth day" . . . is it really a way to get around the process? We are about process, Mr. President Let's do this the right way and get it right instead of making big mistakes and landing ourselves in a huge lawsuit. ¹²

17 31. Despite bipartisan warnings from both houses of the Legislature and the public 18 that SHB 2167 suffered from a flawed legislative process and created an unconstitutional 19 differential tax rate for in-state and out-of-state financial institutions, SHB 2167 was adopted by a 20 53-43 majority¹³ in the House of Representatives and a bare 25-24 majority in the Senate; signed 21 by the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate; and then delivered to the Governor 22 on April 28, the last day of the 2019 Regular Session of the Legislature. Governor Inslee signed 23 the bill into law on May 21, 2019.

32. SHB 2167 was sharply rebuked by editorial boards across the state. The Columbian called the Legislature’s passage of SHB 2167 in the final 48 hours of the Session “an affront to the notion of responsible government.” The Seattle Times accused the Legislature of “bypass[ing] the state constitution and cut[ing] the public out of the process.” The Walla Walla Union-Bulletin called the process that led to SHB 2167’s passage a “disturbing” example of “sleight-of-hand dealmaking made out of sight of the taxpayer.” The News Tribune in Tacoma wrote that the Legislature’s “blatant disregard for public process . . . stinks.” The Spokesman Review criticized the Legislature for passing a “half-baked” bill that likely “violates the U.S. Constitution by treating in-state and out-of-state banks differently.” All these editorial boards stated the obvious: SHB 2167 effectively only taxes “out-of-state banks.” Selections of their commentary on SHB 2167 appear below:

Editorial Board	Commentary on SHB 2167
In Our View: State budget process in need of transparency, The Columbian, May 9, 2019.	Another item that received scant consideration is a sharp increase to the business and occupation tax paid by out-of-state banks. Increasing the tax might or might not be a good idea. But introducing and passing it in the final 48 hours of the session, with little input from stakeholders, is an affront to the notion of responsible governance.
Title-only bills are an insult to democracy, The Spokesman Review, May 12, 2019.	If Democrats had run the bill through the banking committee, they might have slowed down because there’s a good chance it violates the U.S. Constitution by treating in-state and out-of-state banks differently. What makes title-only bills particularly odious, aside from the fact that they exist simply to skirt the intent of the state constitution, is that they deny Washingtonians an opportunity to be engaged participants in their government. Title-only bills are a rush job. They almost always were negotiated behind closed doors and, as with the bank tax, are half-baked because they didn’t go through the normal legislative process. Washington deserves better.
Editorial Board, Washington lawmakers dodge the constitution	In the final hours before the end of the 2019 legislative session, Democrats in Olympia rammed through a tax increase on big banks. They used a parliamentary gimmick called a “title-only

1 with title-only bills, The 2 Seattle Times, May 6, 3 2019.	bill” to bypass the state constitution and cut the public out of the process. Democrats didn’t have two-thirds support for their new bank tax, so they used title-only bill HB 2167, which emerged fully baked from behind closed doors. It targets out-of-state banks and would nearly double the business and occupation tax on those with at least $1 billion in profits worldwide.
6 Editorial Board, New tax 7 hard to swallow; 8 Washington Democrats 9 pull fast one in 10 Legislature’s last 11 weekend, The News 12 Tribune, April 30, 2019.	Democrats threw caution aside in the last 48 hours by steamrolling [SHB 2167]. Reasonable people can disagree on the merits of raising taxes. But a blatant disregard for public process, which often turns up in the waning days of legislative sessions, stinks.
11 Editorial Board, 12 Washington’s Legislature 13 must be more transparent, 14 Walla Walla Union- 15 Bulletin, May 13, 2019.	Unfortunately, the sleight-of-hand dealmaking made out of sight of the taxpayer remains. It’s disturbing our elected officials are not as transparent as they could—or should—be. In this case, lawmakers used a “title-only bill” as the vehicle to push through a tax increase on big banks in the final hours of the legislative session. The Seattle Times reported Democrats used title-only bill HB 2167, which emerged from behind closed doors with all the blanks filled in. It calls for large out-of-state banks to have their business and occupation tax nearly doubled
17 Editorial Board, A 18 troubling short cut for 19 state tax increase on 20 banks, The Herald, May 7, 21 2019.	In all lawmakers gave the legislation about 55 hours of consideration allowing only quickly called testimony in hearings, limited floor debate and little opportunity for the public to consider—much less weigh in on—whether the tax increase on banks would be a good idea.

22 33. The Legislature’s substitution of a title-only bill with SHB 2167 on April 26 was 23 an egregious misuse of the legislative process to railroad a massive tax increase on out-of-state 24 interests through the Legislature without the minimum ten days for analysis, hearing and 25 deliberation mandated by the Washington State Constitution.

26 34. The dormant Commerce Clause of the United States Constitution prohibits states 27 from passing protectionist taxes that punish out-of-state business interests and wall their citizens 28 off from free and competitive markets. A decision upholding SHB 2167 will open the floodgates to protectionist taxes from state lawmakers across the country who—just like the Washington lawmakers who passed SHB 2167—are eager to fill their state’s coffers with tax revenues from a

1 select few out-of-state sources while simultaneously providing a home-court advantage to local 2 businesses. Such protectionist measures will undoubtedly harm Washington once lawmakers in 3 other states set their sights on taxing Washington's largest and most successful businesses.
4 SHB 2167's unconstitutional discrimination against interstate commerce was obvious to 5 lawmakers and editorial boards across the state and was the bill's explicit purpose as articulated 6 by its sponsor, Representative Tarleton.

7 35. If SHB 2167 is not invalidated, then beginning in 2020, Plaintiffs' members will 8 suffer damages by being required to file tax returns and pay the 1.2% B&O surtax created by 9 SHB 2167.

10 VI. CAUSES OF ACTION

11 FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION 12 DECLARATORY JUDGMENT THAT SHB 2167 VIOLATES ARTICLE II, SECTION 36 13 OF THE WASHINGTON STATE CONSTITUTION

14 36. Plaintiffs rely on the allegations of Paragraphs 1 through 35.

15 37. There is an actual, present and justiciable controversy as to whether SHB 2167 16 violates Article II, Section 36 of the Washington State Constitution, which requires legislation to 17 be introduced at least ten days before the final adjournment of the legislative session. A judicial 18 determination on the illegality, invalidity, and unenforceability of SHB 2167 will conclusively 19 resolve these issues of substantial public concern and the parties' dispute.

20 38. Plaintiffs reserve the right to raise any and all legal bases under Washington law to 21 challenge the constitutionality, legality, validity or enforceability of SHB 2167.

22 SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION 23 DECLARATORY JUDGMENT THAT SHB 2167 VIOLATES THE COMMERCE 24 CLAUSE OF THE UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION

25 39. Plaintiffs rely on the allegations of Paragraphs 1 through 38.

26 40. There is an actual, present, and justiciable controversy as to whether SHB 2167
27 violates the dormant Commerce Clause of the United States Constitution, which prohibits states 28 from imposing taxes that discriminate with respect to interstate commerce. SHB 2167 discriminates against interstate commerce by imposing a separate B&O surtax that applies exclusively to large financial institutions with headquarters out-of-state.
